As a former member of the Air National Guard,
Kenneth Albers understands the commitment involved to serve in the Air Force Reserve. Even though I am only a seasonal hire, he does everything in his power to help me fulfill my military obligations despite the inconveniences to his business. All Reserve members should be so fortunate as to have such a supportive boss.

Mr. Dupriest has gone beyond just being a Boss and Employer.

He has always supported me in my service to this country. He has supported me each and every time I have been needed to serve with my unit. He has always made sure that I had support both for my family and bills which can always be a problems during the transition between being a worker and a soldier. He has also taken an active part in maintaining my support, taking the time to resure that my job is always there when I come home. This to me and my family is going Above and Beyond what most employer's would do. Being able to have peace of mind in your employer is almost imposable to find. The business takes a hard hit when I'm gone, but I have always recieved a very nice welcome home. I truly have one of the best supporting employers a Reserve Solider I could every have. I'm very proud to work for him and feel we are a Team in this Nations Defense. Thank you. SSG Tim Scally

Bev has been very supportive of my service in the United States Marine Corps Reserves. I was mobilized overseas for seven months during FY 2005 and Bev assisted with ensuring that all company benefits available during my absence to include differential pay were provided to my family during my absence. Upon returning home I was immediately welcomed back into my current billet. When I explained that I was again being looked at for mobilization again this year, she assisted in the process for submission of paperwork to again receive benefits during my absence. She is again being very supportive of my service responsibilities and has instilled complete confidence within myself and family that I have a secured position when I return in a year or two.

Mr. Rooney is the plant manager. He has an awesome responsible making sure that the plant maintains its operations. Every employee is needed, but when it comes to support of the military he is second to none. During every operation from Operation Desert Storm to Enduring Freedom Every soldier that was employed by the company had his full support. Care packages were sent to all soldiers that were deployed. Soldiers families were continuously called to see if there was something the company could do while there loved one was deployed. The company had four soldiers deployed at once two of which were supervisors. The level of Mr. Rooney's intergity and loyalty to the arms services I strongly feel should not go unnoticed but rewarded.

Allows time off on a moment's notice.

Is willing to pay differential to make up for my losses incurred during deployments.

Paid for a laptop and 24hr/day cellular Internet access that was used by the 35th Infantry Division during recent deployment to New Orleans, LA in support of Hurricane Katrina operations. This cellular link was the only Internet access for the division HQ for the first week of deployment and it allowed for communications with Pentagon and NGB.
Employs 2 guardsmen and is very supportive of both.

Constantly checks on the families of the deployed personnel to make sure their needs are met on the home front.

I am the pastor of a church and currently at the end of a 120 day deployment. My church has continued benefits and pay while I am deployed. Church members have sent at least one large box of books, food, or other per week, every week. Staff and lay people have together picked up the slack for me. I was encouraged by the church to take this deployment and they have encouraged me to take as much time off as I need when I return.

My job has been very supportive of me. When I got the call to go over seas I had month to get my stuff ready. I was first heading over with the 137th PLS unit and the 778th Trans. Co. was already activated in Ft. Riley Ks. I went to drill with the 137th Unit and two days later after that drill weekend I was called up and transfered to the 778th unit. I had less than two weeks to get reay on a short notice. I boss work with me so that I could go see my mother in Alaska that have not seen in four years at the time. After getting back frome Alaska and moved on to Ft. Riley My job sent me care packages big enough just not for me but for the enough of my buddies they send it on every holiday that their was while i was over there. My boss and coworkers are very excited that am back and is giving me time to relax before i come back to work. What is really cool about this is that they never did receive any rules and regs. form the military for what they are to do with me. This is why I think my job desrves this recognition

He was very helpful while I was deployed he helped my wife and my mom with food and money when they really needed it. When I came back for R&R leave he invited me to a company lunch for a production record. When I got back from deployment he helped me with some gas money a couple of days before payday and he got me a Christmas ham and bought me a small gift without being asked. He has been a friend and a lot of support for my family while I was deployed.

I got activated to go to a hostile fire area and not only did Walmart make the transition easy on me and send me care packages, but they continued to pay me difference pay while i was gone. They went above and beyond to show there support for the soldiers under there employment. Thank you.
